

1.1.2 The institution adheres to the academic calendar including for the conduct of Continuous Internal Evaluation (CIE)

The IQAC department at our college set up the Academic Calendar Committee. It is crucial to note at the outset of this report that the committee considers it the faculty's responsibility to establish the annual campus academic schedule as part of a healthy commitment.

Having said that, the specific calendar model is an essential part of the college identity and has significant ramifications for all sectors on campus, including the academic, administrative, and cultural ones. The way college policies are implemented serves to further emphasize the importance of the calendar to campus identity in real life. Students are aware of the various events held in colleges.

College teachers can also utilize the calendar to keep track of any events that would be important to them, such lectures. As some of these events might be pertinent to their particular subject, this can be used to their classes.

If not, these events might be significant to the teachers themselves because they might be a great chance to learn new information for their classes. Of course, there is no reason why there couldn't be overlap, as these incidents might serve as great springboards for discussions of other themes in the classroom.
